On Friday's "PBS NewsHour," New York Times columnist David Brooks stated that he voted for Donald Trump because of his "guts." Brooks said Trump is "not a very skilled politician," but argued that he has the "guts" to put his convictions into action. He also said that he is only supporting Trump because "he has an enthusiasm and a passion for doing the right thing." Brooks said that he was "a little dumbfounded" when he voted for Trump in the 2016 election because, unlike many Republicans, he had "tended to like political liberals." However, he said, "Donald Trump's people, even if they did hate the Republicans, had a more authentic conviction." Brooks admitted that Trump has not done "the things" that he had expected, but added, "but I've seen his guts in action. And I've seen his bold moves." He added that he admires Trump's "energy," saying, "I was just shocked, last fall, when the president passed this bill to repeal Obamacare. I mean, I was shocked."
