1. Field of the Invention
This invention relates to various aspects of harnesses and in particular, to a harness for a child safety seat. More specifically, this invention relates to an attachment that may be used with a child safety seat to allow the safety seat to be removed easily from the vehicle.

2. Description of the Prior Art
Various child safety seats exist on the market today. Most child safety seats are designed to fit into a vehicle seat. The vehicle seat may be a child safety seat or a conventional passenger seat. The child safety seat is usually designed for children between the ages of 0 and three years old. The child safety seat is commonly placed in the vehicle seat when a child is not riding in the vehicle. The child safety seat is designed to securely and safely retain the child in a seat of the vehicle. The child safety seat is releasably coupled to the vehicle so that when the child is to be transported, the child safety seat is removed from the vehicle and then the child is placed in the child safety seat. The child safety seat is then attached to the vehicle. The attachment of the child safety seat to the vehicle seat can be a problem. The process of attaching and detaching the child safety seat from the vehicle is difficult. The child safety seat has to be lifted in order to be properly coupled to the vehicle seat. The seat belts of the vehicle are generally located under the vehicle seat and are attached to the vehicle through the vehicle
