If you are vegan, I highly suggest you do a veg diet. Get away from all the things that are like bread and sugar and stuff like that. You can still eat whole foods and drink milk and water and whatever. You know, it's really boring. You eat tofu, you eat veggie dogs, you eat lentils, you eat whole grains. I eat whole grains, I eat nuts and seeds, I eat low-fat soy-based foods. You know, whole foods are the healthiest foods you can eat and they're very good, you know, for the soul, the soul of a person. You know, the real food, that's where it's at. And I really recommend the healthiest food you can eat is a veg diet. You can eat a vegan diet, but also you can eat more meat and cheese. I really recommend you eat more meat and cheese and it's good for your brain to eat meat. If you're a vegan, you are going to just be a bundle of no-life. You're not going to have much of a life. You're going to be on like a spiritual diet of nothing, you know, because a vegan diet is just that, it's like a spiritual diet of nothing, and that's not very much, is it? And, you know, if you eat healthy food and you eat whole foods, it will improve your health, no doubt about it. But the real life is, is the food that's going to do the whole person good. And if you're going to do the whole person good, it's going to be a veg diet. The whole person will do better if you eat a veg diet. You know, it's the real food that will give you the real life. So, I'd recommend the veg diet. If you want more stuff, eat more meat and cheese and sweets and stuff like that. But a vegan diet will bring you the real life. A lot of vegans don't last in the real world for that reason, because they're starving themselves

Category:Arabic-language sciencesQ: Plotly barchart, filter by category I'm trying to plot a bar graph, but I want the y-axis to only show the values from one category. So if the values are "A","B","C" I want the bars to show "A","B" and no "C" I'm pretty sure it's possible, but I have no idea how. My dataframe looks like this label value 0 A 1 1 B 2 2 C 2d92ce491b
