We can eliminate most of the unwanted noises in an instrument that come from the external sources. Vibration sounds can be categorized in different ways: From the most annoying: 1. Seismic Sounds, 2. Wind Sounds, 3. Noise, 4. Humming Sounds and 5. Distortion Sounds. Seismic Sounds I'm constantly hearing a low low rumble that I can't get rid of. It's so annoying. I'm using my computer as a home server, that's why I was wondering if there is any software that can disable/ mute / eliminate/ erase this noise. I really need to have it gone as soon as possible. I'll be glad for any help. The best way to disable it is to not run the computer in the first place. If you have to operate it, turn off the machine, unplug the power cord from the wall socket, wait 30 minutes, plug it back in. You can also use something like "AERRA 2 Noise Termination Device", which will make it much quieter (and your ears will thank you). I've used the "AERRA 2 Noise Termination Device" and it did a very good job. It does really dampen the noise to where it's bearable. Plus, the thing has dual on/off switches that help immensely in this day and age of over sensitive computers. This sound card works by actually placing a harmonic filter between your speakers and your computer. All sounds are then processed by the sound card, then sent to the speakers. Any sounds that are not in harmony are canceled by the sound card. It also has a mute button that helps eliminate sounds from outside the computer. It has a dual power supply, therefore, you can use it to eliminate unwanted noise even when your computer

A 40-year-old man with Graves' ophthalmopathy was scheduled to undergo open thyroidectomy. Preoperatively, he had mild respiratory muscle weakness and mild scleral thinning, but his pulmonary function test results were normal. Endotracheal intubation was scheduled in the left lateral decubitus position. After a slight induction of anesthesia with a mixture of sevoflurane and oxygen (3:2), tracheal intubation was performed easily through the left maxillary sinus. The duration of anesthesia was 120 minutes. The patient was discharged without complications at the 3rd postoperative day.Q: How do
