EXERCISE 1 – Remove The White Borders The easiest way to remove a border is to use the Magic Wand tool. In addition, the Edit menu has a Cut command that works the same as the cut-out command that we used in GIMP. With the image open in Photoshop, begin by following these steps: 1. Use the Magic Wand tool to select the white border. The white border outlines a border of a specific color. Typically, the border color is part of your logo's color scheme. In the example shown in Figure 1-3, the border color is white. Figure 1-3: The magic wand selects the white border. 2. Right-click (Windows) or Ctrl+click (Mac) and select Cut from the shortcut menu. The Cut command copies the contents of the selection area to a new area

What's New in Version 13.1.4 for Mac Version 13.1.4 is the latest version of Photoshop Elements and continues the tradition of being a fast, intuitive, and easy to use graphics editor. The following are the highlights of this new version: Enlarge & Zoom Improvements. When you zoom in on an image, you may now choose the option to move the image or the tool border around the image, rather than having the image appear smaller and the tool border behind it. Q: For Loop with Ternary Operator (a.k.a If-Else) I am trying to do something I thought was a simple task and ended up going totally crazy. I am trying to do something to the effect of the following function `checkBreakPoint(grade, a, b, c, d, e, f, g, h, i) { if (grade > 4) { return i; } else if (grade > 3) { return a; } else if (grade > 2) { return b; } else { return c; } }` Where a, b, c, d, e, f, g, and h are all variable numbers that can be any number in the range of -5 to +5. The number 5 would be the maximum breakpoint value. So basically what I am trying to do is be able to calculate that what number I am looking for and do not use if statements to calculate that number. Is there a way to do that with a simple ternary operator or any other arithmetic operator? A: There is more efficient way, as the @EgorSkriptunoff mentioned, but you have to understand some thing. The logic of `>=4` or `= 4 && a b)? a : b`. For some conditions, there is a shortcut for it. For example, to check the value is greater than some number, you can use the following `(a > b)? a : b` which means "to evaluate the expression in brackets, return a, if it is less than b, return b". Note that in JavaScript, there is a difference between `(a > b) || (a === b) && (a b) && (a b`, otherwise return false. So, in your case, it will be something like function `checkBreakPoint(grade, a, b, c, d, e, f, g,`

Dancing with the Stars' first farewell Posted on March 1, 2013 (CNN) — Season 7 of “Dancing with the Stars” is the last for Karina Smirnoff and Maksim Chmerkovskiy. So, who will win the Mirrorball trophy? If you think you know, then you’re wrong. Because this week’s celeb farewell is filled with surprises: Four couples are still competing this week, including new competitors Ileana Douglas and Nyle DiMarco and veteran pros Gabby Douglas and Val Chmerkovskiy. Plus, there are adjustments and pairings, two-step partners, and even dancing that takes place outdoors. The evening is actually a sendoff for each of the four couples competing this week. Think of it as the final farewell of the night in what is the ABC show’s final week. (Benjy Shrubin also takes his last spin.) Chmerkovskiy had a spectacular, powerful and fiery final dance during Season 5 with his then-partner, Kirstie Alley, so it’s a safe bet that he’ll be on the edge of his dance shoes during these ceremonies. And with last year’s champion, Karina Smirnoff, returning, that means the judges and the audience will be keenly interested in what they say. The biggest surprise of the night is probably the new two-step partners — Maksim Chmerkovskiy and Ileana Douglas have been paired together. Yes, the two are engaged and the couple won the “America’s Got Talent” season in 2010, but that was the first time they stepped onto the dance floor as a couple. Now, the two (along with Junior Master Brian Boitano) join the growing number of couples to dance the American Smooth version of the dance, and they’re about to learn to really smooth it out. “I’m looking forward to the reaction from the judges,” Chmerkovskiy, 33, says. “I’m very competitive and I want to make sure that my fans love it.” He’s been dancing the Progressive, the Paso Doble and the Viennese Waltz, as well as the basic Foxtrot, but they
