considered beta, so consider it work in progress. 0.1.0 - Special thanks to all who donated and provided useful feedback on previous versions. The present invention relates generally to the field of toothbrushes. More particularly, the invention relates to toothbrushes having improved cleaning ability. Disposable toothbrushes, including electric toothbrushes, are known. Electric toothbrushes use a drive motor to vibrate a portion of a toothbrush head in order to assist in scrubbing and brushing teeth. However, many people find it difficult to properly use electric toothbrushes. For example, although it may be possible to reach the rear portion of the mouth, the electric toothbrush head is often difficult to manipulate within the mouth to effectively remove plaque and other debris. It would be desirable to provide an electric toothbrush having improved cleaning ability. the cells were quantified, and the ratio was calculated (Figure 6{ref-type="fig"}). These data indicated that DTK caused no significant impact on cell viability or cell death in normal and cancer cells. !
