References External links Category: Windows screen savers Q: What is the best way to generate an Excel file using Matlab? I am searching for a function that does exactly the following: given a 2D matrix M: given some "class labels" X generates an Excel file that looks like this: - X values of M are in column A (x-axis) - Y values of M are in column B (y-axis) - class labels are in column C (colour) I have tried xlsread, but it does not have the class labels in the Excel file. Does anyone know a solution? Thanks in advance! A: Consider using the Xlsread function of the File Exchange: xlsfile = xlsread('input.xlsx', 'Sheet1!A1:C1', 'Sheet2!A1:C1'); Where: input.xlsx is the excel file that you want to export Sheet1 and Sheet2 are the name of the sheets that you want to export The function will generate the file as: Column A contains all the values in the first sheet Column B contains all the values in the second sheet Colour is only set for the values in column C H-2 down-regulation and non-specific tolerance induction.
