Many organizations have recently discovered that data gathered in a reliable way results in better information, which drives better decisions, and ultimately, better business results. In this talk I will examine a wide range of tactics and strategies for data collection. I'll show how many techniques we have for gathering information and what the pros and cons of each are. I will focus on the benefits of data that doesn't come from spreadsheets. How we collect information like and update it in a timely manner, how we protect it, how we report it, and how we use it to drive good decisions. I'll also cover how we're becoming less reliant on data in order to make good decisions, and how we can use other sources of information to make the best decisions. I've used these techniques in large and small organizations. I've also helped numerous organizations utilize these methods. And that's why I know they work. If you want to learn how to collect better data, contact me at [View more videos at: So you want to create your own website? We're here to help you understand the basics of this digital online world.
