NEW YORK (AP) - By his second year in MLB, Vlad Guerrero was the offensive leader in the American League and easily won AL MVP honors. Guerrero's OPS of 1.107 in 2003 is a career-high, but it still has to be considered one of the greatest individual seasons in the history of the Houston Astros. He also became the first player to hit 50 homers in his first three seasons. Guerrero entered Tuesday having been named the All-Star Game MVP last summer, but this season he's been in the shadow of slugger Barry Bonds. Bonds had 17 home runs at this point last season, compared to Guerrero's 15, but he finished the season with 49 and beat Guerrero for the MVP by 74 points. Guerrero finished the season with a .346 batting average and a .832 OPS, which is well above the .811 by Bonds. Bonds also had 566 hits, three more than Guerrero. Bonds had 115 walks, Guerrero 107. Guerrero has had two different 40/40 seasons, but his other credentials are unquestioned. He was a Gold Glove winner and an MVP in 2003, when he led the league in hits and batted .336.

Nationals star Nneka Ogwumike's sudden hiatus from basketball this season wasn't due to a season-ending elbow injury as previously reported. It was due to a "dead arm" issue, she told reporters in Morgantown, West Virginia.

Ogwumike has been indefinitely placed on the WNBA's inactive list, according to a league spokesman. She's been sidelined since January 24 and the Minnesota Lynx, where she played last season, signed forward Grace Jackson to the roster. Ogwumike, a four-time All-WNBA honoree, competed in two games this season, going scoreless in 20 minutes of play in an eight-point loss to Indiana Fever in the regular-season finale. The 6-foot-4, 180-pound center has dealt with various injuries the past few seasons. Ogwumike was picked third overall in the 2009 WNBA draft.

First and foremost, our own work is focused on the role of immune activation in the neuropathogenesis of experimental autoimmune encephalomyelitis (EAE), a central nervous system (CNS) inflammatory demyelinating disease that serves as a model of MS and other autoimmune disorders of the CNS. The second aim of this core is to examine the role of immune activation in animal models of neurodevelopmental disorders (NDDs) of schizophrenia (SZ), autism and/or attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD), which are exceedingly prevalent in industrialized societies. In addition to the basic science aspects of this research, we have recently initiated a clinical project to examine cytokine profiles in the brains of patients with neuropsychiatric disorders and control subjects to determine if cytokine-based markers of immune activation (TNF and IL-2) are found in these patients. In this model, we hypothesized that TNF and IL-2 may serve as markers of neuroinflammation. Building on this, we are also examining the effects of pharmacological
