The Foreground Layer A foreground is an image that is on top of the background layer. In some types of artwork, it may be useful to have the foreground contain an image or other creation on top of the background layer. This allows for placement of information (for example, images, paths, or text) to be kept behind the background layer and also allows for placing the foreground layer at a different level than the background layer.

(1) Field of the Invention The invention relates to surgical instruments. More particularly, the invention relates to suture passers used in arthroscopic surgical procedures and the like. (2) Description of the Prior Art Suture passers are known in the prior art, both as being used to create multiple portals in soft tissue for visualization of sub-intimal structures and as being used as a multiple portal instrument to simultaneously deliver suture and attach sub-intimal structures in a single cannula puncture. Multiple portal instruments that deliver both suture and attach soft tissue structures simultaneously in a single cannula puncture are disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 5,746,724 to Simmons et al. and U.S. Pat. No. 5,899,845 to Benderev et al., both of which are incorporated herein by reference. Prior art suture passers are bulky and inefficient at approximating the tissue in the forceps jaws. Furthermore, prior art suture passers have a limited practical working range of 2.5 to 3.5 mm. In addition, prior art suture passers may inadvertently penetrate the tissue surrounding the skin or fascia prior to placement of suture. The invention is a suture passer that can be used to create multiple portals in tissue for visualization of sub-intimal structures and that can be used to simultaneously deliver and attach sub-intimal structures in a single cannula puncture. The invention is capable of creating sub-intimal portals of 2.5 to 4.0 mm in width and can approximate the tissue in the forceps jaws for further manipulation. The invention is capable of creating portals that extend into muscle and tendon tissue. The invention is directed to a suture passer that approximates tissue in the forceps jaws by means of an inner handle having a longitudinal axis and an outer arcuate surface, a base surrounding the longitudinal axis of the inner handle and having a pair of forceps jaws, a pair of arcuate pad surfaces each being radially spaced and mounted adjacent an inner surface of the base and being spaced in parallel relation to the arcuate surface, the pad surfaces being adapted to bias the tissue in the forceps jaws toward the arcuate surface, and a bearing block surrounding the longitudinal axis of the inner handle and adapted to receive the outer end of the arcuate surface of the inner handle. The bearing block can be mounted on the base directly, or indirectly, as described in greater detail below. The bearing
